

I Want To Fix My County, How Do I Get Started?

Research | Resources | Roadmap

Introduction:

There is no perfect recipe. You just must get started and adjust from there. Battle plans must be flexible and fluid. They must be unique to your army, your terrain, and your enemy. I will share some of my ideas, some things that have worked for me, some great resources and people to look to for more insight, but ultimately you will have to jump in and adjust as you go. I will put these in an order that mimics how I got started, but I cannot stress enough the need to be fluid, and you may wind up in a position where you can work through phases concurrently. I am no expert. I am just an amateur who dug into the work of the experts and compiled information that helped me get started. I am still wading through this myself. My county is not fixed yet. But it will be. I hope you will find helpful information in what I've provided here.

Research Phase:

Research is important but do not use research as an excuse to delay or waste time. You will never have all the answers but use a brief research time to lay a foundation of knowledge. Please do not miss opportunities for action because you are stuck in the research phase. The next couple of pages will be focused on the research/resources. If you just want to see my tips for action, skip to page 3.

1. Research your County Commissioners. Get information on the following:
 - a. Every state is different. In my state, (Texas), every county commissioner board consists of five people – four commissioners and the county judge, all of whom get one equal vote. In your state, you may have a different number of commissioners and you may not have a county judge who sits on the board.
 - b. Commissioners represent districts or precincts. Which commissioner is yours? What can you find about them? What is their reputation?
 - c. Learn about the other commissioners as well.
 - d. Are any of the commissioners up for election this year? Identify which ones as well as their challengers.
2. Research the election process in your county and identify which machines/software is used. This is admittedly hard to do. It is very secretive and usually buried.
 - a. On the website for elections in my county, the website itself has a copyright at the bottom of the page. The copyright is by Scyt! Scyt! is a company that provides electronic voting systems with proven manipulation and has Soros and DNC connections. So, Scytl controls our elections and even “owns” our official election website for the county.

- b. Look for the carrot that got the machines into your county – Grant Money. In my county, and so many others, grant money was given in exchange for accepting the machines/software. These grants came from the Center for Tech and Civic Life, under the guise of covid relief, and are public record.
 - c. Dig into local news stories. In my county, the local press covered the grant money as well as in the installation of the machines/software. These articles also pointed to the local officials who were most involved in the installation and supported the technology.
 - d. Here are two articles on how 2020 was bought:

<https://teapartyorg.ning.com/forum/the-2020-election-wasn-t-stolen-it-was-bought-by-mark-zuckerberg>
3. Research the stolen election: how was it stolen, how was that theft covered up, what has been done and what must still be done? These videos and posts will answer those questions.

Roadmap Phase:

1. Start a Conversation

- a. The first conversation may be with your friends and circle of patriots in your area. Share what the goal is and get on the same page. Assemble your army. The power of the citizens is in our numbers, but do not be discouraged nor give up if your army is small. One person + God and The Truth is exponentially more powerful than these liars and their web. Just get started with what you have and recruit as you go.
- b. The next conversation needs to be with your county commissioners. Different counties do things differently. Some have time for public comment. Others only allow for public comment in response to agenda items. A phone call to your commissioner's office can provide answers to these questions.

2. Take the Next Step

- a. If your commissioners court allows for public comment, my advice is to just show up! Keep the element of surprise. They may only provide 2-3 minutes for you to speak but prepare some key notes and make the most of it. Get as many patriots to attend as possible. Encourage as many people to speak as will do so, but simply a massive presence to support those who do speak is powerful.

Focus on the fact that you have no confidence in your elections, or your vote and you want to get rid of the machines. You want to return to secure paper ballots, hand counted, in one-day.

- b. If your court does not allow public comment, you have to get on the agenda to speak. This is unique to each court, so you will need to dig into how to get on the agenda in your county.
 - c. If you know or have access to an expert, ask them to speak at the meeting as well.
 - d. If your commissioners dismiss you, show up at the next meeting with another speech and more people. Continue to do this until they bend to the will of the people.
3. Addressing Potential Roadblocks
- a. If you are silenced by your court either because they will not let you speak before the court, or because they have heard your repeated demands and denied them, you have a couple of options.
 - b. First, you could take the army you have assembled to a neighboring county where the commissioners are righteous and honest and will work with you. Ultimately, we want to see this in every county, so that is not a loss. It is a pivot, which is a necessity in war.
 - c. However, if you do not have the option of trying another county or you are determined to root out the corruption in your own county, you dig in and prepare for a fight.
 - i. If your commissioners are obstinate about fixing your elections, this means they likely are motivated by some form of corruption or personal gain. What this looks like is different in each place, but money is a common theme. Maybe their corruption is related to Zuck Bucks and grants that flooded these rural counties. Maybe they have personal connections that are immoral, unethical or a conflict of interest. Maybe the chair they are sitting in was guaranteed to them in exchange for installing the machines/software. All of these are possibilities (plus many I didn't detail), but they may or may not be the case in your scenario.
 - ii. How do you identify this corruption? It is not easy. They cover their tracks well. Look for stories in local publications that may provide a trail of breadcrumbs as it relates to timing or relationships surrounding the installation of the machines. Pull at the strings of former employers and colleagues, former commissioners, current local politicians who are upstanding, candidates for commissioners, etc. until you find the loose string – the person willing to talk.

- iii. There is a lot of power in public awareness and pressure. Consider contacting the local press, taking out ads, forming rallies, door-knocking, or any other methods of using public backlash to apply pressure (in a legal and peaceful manner).
 - iv. At this point, you and your team will need to take over. There is no blueprint for this nor a plan that covers every variable. But you know your county and your elected officials better than anyone else, especially at this point, and you will know how to best proceed.
- d. Pray! Pray over your personal steps and those of your team. Pray for God to soften the hearts of the elected officials. Pray for God to guide your team and provide you with the information you need at each step. God is orchestrating amazing things and weaving incredible stories together in the various efforts to fix 2020. He can do so for you too. Just stay focused on Him and keep everything you do honest, ethical and rooted in Him.

If I can help in any way, please don't hesitate to reach out to me. As my team continues to learn and make progress in our county, I will share updates to my channel. Be sure you are following me there to receive them.
